A QUESTION OF VALUES.

"Kisses are cheap," said Bob Maize, flashing a wicked glance at me.
"Cheap I call, when a girl so fair stoops to be kissed by John St. Clair."

Ne'er a word to I daign to reply
As I watch the sunset fade and die,
And in the shadows that fall about
Much of life's sweetness seems shut out.

He kissed me, yes, ere he went away:
'Twas a memory, he said, he could keep for age.

And Bob don't know. Ah, what man could Guess one-half that a woman would?

A year later, with softened tread,
Bob comes in and says, "He's dead!"
"St. Clair?" I ask, and there he lies A wondering question in Bob's blue eyes.

"I thought you know—Bess, is it true That the fellow was really nothing to you?"
I raise my eyes; they are stern and cold;
Bob's are not—they're ablaze and bold.

"My darling! Mabel! Ah, at this late day—
For I know now why he went away."
"But my kisses are cheap—I remember, you see."

"They are more than untold wealth—to me."

—Yankee Blade.

A Costly Bible.

The most expensive illustrated book yet made is said to be a Bible from the Theodore Irving of Oswego. It is valued at $10,000, for Mr. Irving paid that sum for the work. The original was in seven volumes, 16mo., and by the addition of drawings and engravings it was enlarged to 60 volumes, each 16 by 24 inches, which occupy 17 feet of space on the shelves. This remarkable book contains 8,000 pen and pencil drawings, etchings, engravings, lithographs, oil and water color paintings and mezotints. Among the illustrations are parts of the "Great Bible of Cranmer," printed in 1533; parts of the "Bishop's Bible," printed in 1568; parts of the "Nurem-burg Bible," the first illustrated Bible published, printed in 1466, and of "Luther's Version" and the "Breeches Bible."
The extender has brought together not only all that could be found of the best and rarest efforts at illustrating the text of the Bible, but also the art of modern painters and engravers, making it the most complete and valuable copy of the Bible in existence.—Washington Star.

Fashions in Glass.

Very few years ago nothing would please but glass blown to the utmost thinness, either plain or engraved with ornamental designs, but now we have returned to the heavy faceted decanters and goblets, which we were brought up to despise. Which is the stricter taste?
Undoubtedly that which we have just discarded for the special quality of glass, which can be rivalled in no other material, is its transparency and capacity for being blown into exceeding lightness.
When cut into facets, the former quality is impaired, the latter is not displayed, and the object depends for beauty on its brilliance, in which it competes at a disadvantage with the most brilliant of discuss. In an art consists not less in bringing out the highest quality of material than in revealing the mind of the artist.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Boiling Down a Speech.

An old newspaper man in Washington tells this story of Mr. Blaine:
"My first experience with Mr. Blaine was when, as correspondent for a western paper, I endeavored to get him to withdraw from the official reporters of the house a speech which he had made in order that I might make an abstract of it."

"How much of this do you want to use?" Mr. Blaine asked.

"I replied that I thought I would send about half of it."

"Then I will make an abstract myself," said he, "reducing it one-half. I do not doubt your skill, but I want this speech boiled down by his friends."
—New York World.

The Ways of Elephants.

A big elephant which was employed to drag away the carcass of a dead bullock and had allowed the burden to be attached by ropes without observing what it was happened to look around and instantly bolted, its fright increasing every moment as the unknown object jumped and bumped at its heels. After running some miles, like a dog with a tin can tied to its tail, the elephant stopped and allowed itself to be turned around and drew the bullock back again without protest.—London Spectator.

A Sure Sign.

When a young man talks about the business of "our firm" in a pitch of voice that can be heard from one end of a street car to the other, it is a sure sign that his wages have been raised to $5 a week.—New York Herald.

Convicted.

Judge—Prisoner, do you acknowledge your guilt?
Prisoner—No, my lord. The speech for the defense has convinced even me of my innocence.—Exchange.

It is worth while for a man to venture his life to carry a rope to a sinking ship, or to save a great cause, but to win a line in a college paper or the applause of a crowd—is such glory worth the price?

Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote a novel which he called "The House of Seven Gables." His son Julian, who is the father of seven children, calls his house
"The House of Seven Gables."

There is no accounting for tastes in this topsy turvy world. A New York woman wears a ring in which is set in a circle of diamonds her first baby's first tooth.

Seneca, when tired writing his treatises on morals, found amusement in going over his accounts and calculating how much interest was due him.

When a woman says that she is afraid of a particular man, it is a covert, perhaps an unconscious, confession that she is strangely drawn to him.

The man who hasn't any work to do never seems to be quite happy unless he is bothering somebody else who has.

Honesty is the Best Policy.

HOW MANY deaths have been the result of treating with unscrupulous demagogues.

How many deaths have been caused by the use of poison (morphine, acconite, strychnine, belladonna, etc.)

In how many cases has death been hastened by the use of mineral (mercury, iron, zinc, chloral).

In how many cases have men and women been ruined for life by the use of the ever ready knife, at the hands of a so-called Specialist.

How many people there are who go from doctor to doctor and from hospital to hospital, suffering from a complication of diseases, and being treated for first one thing and then another, and never realizing the least benefit.
Never in any case having received anything but a combination of mineral poison, and as a consequence, accelerated misery and distress.

To such the discovery of a doctor who understands his or her case, who applies a common sense treatment and relieves the sufferer from pain and distress by Nature's remedies, is like a flash of heavenly light from a dark and overcast sky.

UNDER THE DOME.

Pen Pictures of the Nation's Capital.
C. D. VanDuser.

The beautiful and perfectly proportioned crown of the Capitol, surmounted by the bronze Goddess of Liberty, holding aloft the scales of justice, is the first object of which one catches a glimpse as he approaches the gay Paris of America, by one of the many winding avenues. Literally speaking the "dome" is the white terraced hemisphere of marble and granite that crowns the massive and magnificent structure known as the Capital building. Within its very shadow and picturesque situation it is the city of Washington.

Metaphorically speaking "The Dome" is the vast canopy beneath which pulsates all that is typically American. Within its shadow can be kindled and observed both sides of America's intellectual, political and social life, the nobler side of which makes America the beacon light of an advancing civilization. It is in this latter sense that the term "The Dome" is to be used. Under the above title I will endeavor from time to time to give my readers such pen pictures, glimpses and anecdotes as are the result of a desultory observation of Washington life.

A COSMOPOLITAN CITY.

The cosmopolitan character of the population of this city makes it a living picture of Americanism. There is no better place to study as a nation. Had Max O'Reilly studied Americanism as found in the City of Washington or had Rudyard Kipling remained long enough in America to have come in touch with America's people instead of standing on the rear platform of a fast vanishing vestibuled train their criticism of the new world, both ridiculous and superficial, would not have made them the laughing stock of literary Americans. As much as Washington is the center of political activity, composed of representatives from all States, there can be found here those distinctive types of Americans, which are the outgrowth of a nation as vast in extent and as varied in climate as ours. While we are a nation of one blood, yet with the activity with which it circulates, so to speak, under various climatic changes and conditions has produced a people as varied in intellectual activity as are the faunas in a vast diastatic nation of the world. Americans have but one trait in common and that is a unified patriotism and love for the flag whose folds unfurled from Maine to California. The old winds of New England, the fresh breezes from the Atlantic, the long and rigorous Winters have produced a type of people cold, stern, uncomplaisant, aggressive, a people bound down by tradition and fixed precedent, hard loving and intellectually proud. The fragrant laden breezes and ever lasting sunshine of the tropical South has produced another type, loving, generous, generous, impulsive and eloquent, a people whose nature is tinged with the fancies of romance and the harmony of music and poetry. From the summit of the Sierras, from which can be seen a wilderness of beauty and unprecedented development, have sprung another type whose inventive genius, sharpened by practical experiences in life, has produced an energetic and enterprising people whose restless spirits reach into the future and anticipate slowly unfolding things in the rapidity of development. These types all meet in Washington.

Aside from the unique representations of Americans, there is to be found in the foreign legation a perfect oval of nations. Each heart of a legation has a more or less numerous retinue of followers who cling closely to the mannerisms, dress, language and religion of their own countries. As the brightest and brainiest people of each particular locality are to be found here so are the foreign legations usually composed of the representatives of the best classes of the old world. From a sociological standpoint the opportunities for reflective observation are unlimited. Here is found the most perfect social development as well as its most nauseating element. Here is found the model of political excellence in theory and the glaring imperfections as found in actual practice, and in her libraries, museums, art galleries, lecture lyceums and within her seminary of learning is to be found the intellectual progress and development of America. Before many years have passed the City of Washington will be the great literary center of the new world.

Strange indeed would be the character of the individual who would not yield in some degree to the susceptible influences that surround one here or fail to gather occasionally some benefit from desultory observation or fail to thrive intellectually in an air pregnant with refinement and learning and in which one can run the whole gamut of political and intellectual activity.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS DISAPPOINTING.

The first impressions gained of a city are those which arise from external observation before one has had time to examine into the real life that throbs in a vast municipality. The first days' impression of Washington are always disappointing. Aside from its overgrown public buildings it seems to be a great overgrown country village. But gradually its beauties unfold and impress one. Absorbed in the contemplation of that most perfectly proportioned and most beautiful building in the world—the Capitol; of the large, awkward Pension building, the largest brick building in the world; of the classic outlines of the State, War and Navy buildings, representing the artistic style of the Italian renaissance, one soon forgets that her public business streets are lined with unbecoming buildings only three and four stories in height, such in appearance as one would find in the remote suburbs of a city, or in south San Francisco or south Chicago. Pennsylvania Avenue, which is the largest and handsomest boulevard in the world, is 180 feet wide, with a pavement white as marble, smooth as a dancing floor and as clean as a tidy housewife's kitchen, has its beauty marred by rows of village-like buildings. Within three blocks of the Capitol are low, dingy, three-story buildings, such as one seen in the crooked quarters of New Orleans. Yet, after all, the lack of sky-scraping buildings with the busy commercial life and intensity of financial activity which is shortening the American's life, is a refreshing. Washington is no wise a commercial city. The people take life leisurely and are not rushed. Washington, after all, is but a large village combining with the life of a great city all the charms of rural simplicity. Its wide avenues, its parks, circles and triangles with outspreading branches from large trees and shading shrubbery in wild profusion gives Washington the appearance of a city in a forest.

A PACIFIC CITY.

One who has lived in Washington any length of time can never be content in any other city. There is an indescribable charm about its environment, something lacking in its social life, something lacking in the political activity that draws one back even after years of absence. There are only two cities that I have seen in America that remind me of Washington in any respect, and the similarity rests solely in external appearance—they are Los Angeles and Denver. One shuts his eyes to hide the narrow, dirty streets of New Orleans and even Boston, the self-contaminated hub of the universe, with its narrow, crooked streets and ungainly buildings creates a most unfavorable impression on one. No matter in what city one must suffer by comparison with Washington.

The avenues are from 100 to 180 feet wide and radiate from the Capitol, which is the hub. A row of trees on each side shade the brick sidewalks that are themselves as wide as ordinary streets. The numbered and lettered streets run at right angles to each other and whenever intersected by the avenues circles and parks are formed, which are adorned with large statues and laid out in beautiful lawns and beds of flowers with enough trees to give a cool shade. The buildings of the city are of red brick, with the exception of the public buildings which are white and stand out in striking contrast and only add to the general ensemble. With this cursory introduction I shall proceed in my next letter to give something of the early history of the city. I believe that we all ought to be familiar with the history and present condition of the most wonderful city in America and without being tedious I hope my readers may find that which will be both interesting and instructive in my future letters.

THE SQUIRREL FEAST.

Stringent Measures Should be Adopted Against the Destructive Rodents.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—That destructive little pest, popularly known as the sleeping or pine squirrel, has made its appearance here again this Spring. It will be remembered that a year ago they emigrated from the foothills where they used always to be long and made an inroad upon this valley doing very considerable damage to grain crops and completely wiping out garden trunks in some places. But the damage done last Summer will be nothing as compared to what will be sustained this season, now that they have established a foothold amongst us, unless vigorous and concerted action is at once taken to put them down, for I do not suppose it will be possible to exterminate them altogether. Having just emerged from their Winter quarters, after hibernating for many months, they are now poor and hungry and may be readily poisoned with a paste made of Graham flour, or oatmeal and strychnine placed at the mouths of their burrows, which are most numerous along the banks of water ditches. Those ranchers who made the unwelcome acquaintance of these rodents last Summer will need no warning as to the havoc they are capable of doing, but others more fortunate, who escaped their ravages, may be apt to think lightly in regard to the matter and fail to adopt the necessary measures to guard against them. To all such I would strongly urge the advisability of exercising a vigilant lookout and having poison ready to put out as soon as the first one of them appears on their ranches. They will surely find out the truth of the old proverb in this case that "a stitch in time saves nine," for these squirrels are amazingly prolific and a couple of them destroyed now will prevent the propagation of a whole colony in a few months hence. It therefore behooves ranchers, one and all, to take united and systematic action, and wage unrelenting war upon this recent and formidable enemy for it seems to have come to stay and its presence is synonymous to serious destruction of crops. RANCHER.

Shipping Cattle to Chicago.

The New Era says C. M. Baason, a Chicago buyer, has purchased 670 beef steers from John Tullard, representing Miller & Lux. The price paid was 6 1/2 cents. The stock will be driven to Winnemucca and shipped from that point, instead of Lovelock. It appears that the Union Pacific and S. P. R. R. have a compact whereby Huntington on the Utah Northern and Winnemucca, equidistant from Ogden, are made terminal points with a special rate of $169 a carload to Chicago, while the rate west of those points is $380 for a 20-foot car, with 3 1/2 per cent. added for each additional foot.

Under such circumstances, it pays to drive stock to Winnemucca and ship from there.

A Shooting Scrape.

Last Sunday, at Kaler, Cal., says the Appeal, Bill Withers fired four shots at a man named Mitchell, said to be from Los Angeles. Two of the shots hit Mitchell, one in the breast and the other in the fleshy part of one of his arms. The wounds are not considered dangerous.

Withers, who has been arrested and lodged in jail, is the man who shot Mike Torrey, a Wells Fargo messenger, at Hawthorne, some years ago.

SENATE COMMITTEES.

Senator Stewart is a Member of Six of Them.

"Every golden-brown Senator in the Republican Senatorial caucus, except Chandler of New Hampshire, voted to remove Senator Stewart from the Committee on Appropriations. The pretext was that Stewart's acceptance of a committee chairmanship from the Democrats barred him from asking favors from the Republicans."—Journal, March 22.

When Wm. M. Stewart made the campaign for his present office of United States Senator from Nevada, he stated distinctly that if re-elected to the Senate it would be upon the distinct issue of the coinage of 412 1/2 grains of standard silver as the standard dollar and unit measure of value upon the same terms and with like power and privileges with 25.8 grains of gold, now constituted by coinage and by law the standard unit measure of value. That was his distinct campaign issue; on that he was elected and both the Republican and Democratic parties by platform and resolution denounced the policy of the coinage of silver and both insisted and now insist on the measurement of all values by the gold dollar unit measure of value. This issue took Stewart out of the Republican party—that Sherman, who leads the Republican party in finance and dictates its gold policy, should throw Stewart if he could, was Sherman size and like. But the Republican party had no committee to make in the present Congress, and Stewart, not being in the Republican party gave the Sherman-Republicans a chance to try to sting but no object for their lance to recoil upon.

The Democrats who control the committees of the Senate, took and arranged all the committees they cared to control, and allowed the Republicans a minority representation on all the committees and chairmanships on unimportant committees.

At the Senate now stands reorganized Senators Brier, Cawey, Gorman, Platt, Power, Ransom and Washburn, each are members of seven committees; Stewart and twenty other Senators are members of six committees each, while Jones of Nevada and Sherman of Ohio, and the rest of the Senators are on five committees each or less. That settles Senator Stewart's committee standing in the Senate and his standing as a Senator so far as committee service can.
